Caron's director for 1916 gives the population of Hopkinsville as 11,265.

More than 200 civilians were killed on a train between Mexico City and Cuernavaca by Mexican rebels, according to advices received in San Antonio.

A woman at Brazil Ind., while putting her arms around her husband to kiss him goodbye, discharged a pistol in his pocket. She was seriously wounded. Her husband was a miner and carried the gun for protection.

The Serbian army driven out of Serbia was taken to the island of Corfu and wintered and has been reorganized and with full equipment has been landed at Saloniki for service with the allies. Originally there were 300,000, but the strength of the new army is not given.

At a meeting of members of the Winchester Development Company held Friday night the company went on record as favoring the commission form of government, and a committee was appointed to agitate the question with a view to holding an election to test the sense of the people regarding the matter.

J. S. Anderson, negro elevator operator at the Paducah City Hall, who recently became wealthy when oil was found on land he owned in Texas, has become a philanthropist. He is negotiating a deal for the West Kentucky Industrial College property, adjoining Paducah, and if the trade is made will increase the capacity of the building on the site and present the property to the negro people of Kentucky for a college. The West Kentucky Industrial College is a negro institution, but has not been successful owing to a lack of funds.

BINNS AND M'GAUGHEY

Will Be Hosts of One Hundred Visitors at Pee Dee To-day.

At least one hundred North Christian people will be feasted at Binns' Mill to-day at 12 o'clock. In 15 or 20 autos they will be driven by R. H. McGaughey's stock farm, Col. A. M. Henry's mint bed and on to Pee Dee, where the big pot will be put in the little one.

Crofton will send 60, Honey Grove, Sinking Fork, Pleasant Hill and other places smaller delegations.

Speeches will be made by A. M. Casey, R. E. Cooper, R. H. McGaughey, W. C. Binns and perhaps others.

MORE SUITS AGAINST CITY.

Two more suits have been filed against the city of Hopkinsville by colored people, growing out of the attempt to improve Howe street in the fifth ward. The petitions are Cornelia Western and J. H. Laprade, who pray for $400 and $500 respectively. They allege that the cutting down of the street on which their property abuts has damaged the value of the places in the sums asked.

DAMAGES ASKED.

Richard Leavell has sued the L. & N. railroad company for $500 damages. He says that on April 4 he contracted with the railroad company to transport a carload of mules from St. Louis to Hopkinsville and that by reason of the careless manner in which the car was handled and looked after three of the mules were badly injured.

MUSIC RECITAL.

The annual recital of Miss Follanby's music class will be given this evening at the Methodist church.

CRABBE, REGENSTEIN, HAMLETT

Sued For $80,623 By John C. Duffy For Alleged Unauthorized Expenditures.

IN STATE SUPT.'S OFFICE

First Fruits of Probe Into the Expenditures of All Departments.

Frankfort, Ky., May 29.—Three suits to recover to the State school fund from former State superintendents and their bondsmen an aggregate of $80,623.42, were filed in the Franklin circuit court Saturday by Special Assistant Attorney General John C. Duffy.

He sued Barksdale Hamlett with his bondsmen, Rufus H. Vansant and D. W. Gardner, together with the widow and executor of the late John C. C. Mayo, another bondsman, for $64,711; J. G. Crabbe, with his bondsmen, Frank P. James, for $10,550.43, and Ellsworth Regenstein, with the National Surety Company, for $5,361.09.

The suit against Hamlett includes salary alleged to have been illegally drawn by him and his wife; alleged unauthorized expenses allowed Hamlett; the cost of alleged unauthorized publications, and salaries of clerks and stenographers, whose positions the Court of Appeals held in a recent test suit were not provided for by law.

The salary of the State superintendent, acting as school inspector, was increased by the 1912 General Assembly, and until February, 1913, when it was held that Hamlett was not entitled to the increase as it was made during his term, he drew $1,395, which is sued for.

Up to that time he had paid Mrs. Hamlett as a clerk in the department $1,000 annually and he then increased it to $2,000. The petition prays the recovery of the $6,916.67 received by her, and in any event the $2,916.67, which she drew as an increase.

The petition alleges that Hamlett illegally drew for himself as inspection and contingent expenses $8,517.50 during the four years of his term. The alleged unauthorized expenditures for publications amount to $23,037.47.

J. G. Crabbe, who was elected in 1907, gave a blanket bond, with former Auditor Frank P. James on it. He is charged in the suit with $2,770.51 paid out for clerical salaries not authorized by law; $2,672.26 paid out of the school fund for alterations in the offices of the Department of Education, which were originally intended for the Historical Society and were ordered changed by the Capital Commission, provided the expense was borne by school fund, and with $5,117.66 for alleged unauthorized publications.

Ellsworth Regenstein, of Newport, who was appointed State superintendent by Governor Willson, when Prof. Crabbe resigned in 1910 to become president of the Eastern State Normal, gave bond of $25,000 in the National Surety Company. He is charged with $816.60 expenses drawn by him without itemizing his account; $3,045.39 for clerical salaries not authorized by law, and $1,400 for expenses of alleged unauthorized publications.

WEATHER FOR THE WEEK.

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Weather forecasts for the week beginning today issued by the weather bureau, for the various parts of the country, says:

Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Generally fair weather and normal temperatures are probable during the week.

Region of the great lakes—Partly overcast weather and moderate temperatures except that local showers are probable at the beginning of the week.

CLOSING WEEK
CITY SCHOOLS

Largest Class of Graduates In History of School.

CLASS DAY THURSDAY

Commencement Exercises at The Tabernacle Friday Night.

Final examinations of the city High School were held last week and the closing exercises will be held this week.

The class day program will be at the Tabernacle at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

The graduating exercises will be held Friday night at 8 o'clock at the tabernacle. The graduating exercises this year promise to be unusually interesting and entertaining. The graduating address will be made by Prof. J. A. Dickey of Bowling Green.

The music will be furnished by the High School Orchestra and a chorus of sixteen selected voices from the school. Miss Julia Arnold has charge of the chorus. The music this year should be a great improvement over that of previous years as Miss Arnold has had more time this year to devote to music. The orchestra will be conducted by Prof. E. N. Mallary.

The honors will be awarded by Prof. Koffman. Prof. Koffman also has several scholarships which he will give out that night.

There are forty-five students enrolled in the Senior class. Those enrolled are as follows: Misses—Juanita Bartley, Imogene Bartley, Mary Belle Bible, Louise Breathitt, Mary Campbell, Elizabeth Cayce, Davis Claggett, Mary Fox Clardy, Anna Nell Earle, Frances Garnett, Brentwood Gee, Eleanor Henry, Ruth Haden, Elizabeth McPherson, Sallie Mayes, Bertha Means, Ruby Morris, Mary Belle Radford, Grace Richards, Anna Scheifer, Myrtha Southall, Amelia Starling, Bessie Walker, Annie Waller, Myra Winfree, and Lillie Mae Wortham. Messrs—Robert Winfree, McFarland Wood, William Thompson, McHenry Tichenor, William Tandy, Phil Roberts, Joe Mosley, Lee Oldham, John Metcalfe, Porter Lackey, David Hooser, Livingston Leavell, Earle Fowler, Petit Fentress Bryant Charlton, Manning Brown, Milton Buckley, Edward Breathitt and Robert Brumfield.

No Sale.

The Hill House property offered for sale Saturday at public auction was knocked off to John H. Bell for $12,300, but the sale was rejected.

TRICE SALE
THURSDAY

Will Open One of the City's Most Beautiful Additions.

ON SOUTH MAIN STREET

Forty Building Lots To Be Sold at Public Auction at 10:30 a. m.

The most valuable addition to the residence district of the South side that has been made in several years will be the opening of the tract of land owned by John B. Trice on South Main street, just beyond the city limits. It has been divided into 40 building lots. A crescent shaped avenue to be known as Latham avenue runs through the tract with building lots on either side. This avenue and other streets have been graded and concrete walks will be laid in front of every lot.

The sale, which will be put on next Thursday, will be conducted by the Newbury Realty & Auction Co., of Warsaw, N. C., of which J. H. Newbury is President. He will be assisted by B. P. Sandlin and H. F. Walters, who have been here for a week or two. The auctioneer will be W. H. Matthews, of Greensboro, N. C.

A novel feature of the sale will be that $27.50 in gold will be paid for the best names suggested for the addition, $20 to the first best, $5 to the second and $2.50 for the third. These names are to be handed in at the sale and passed upon by a disinterested committee.

The sale will begin at 10:30 o'clock a. m. Free autos will take the people from down town to the sale.

This property is very valuable and is just one mile from the court house. It is on the South side of the city in a most popular residence section and is destined to be one of the city's most beautiful additions.

DECORATION DAY.

About thirty-five old veterans of the civil war gathered Sunday morning at the Christian Church to attend the memorial service and sermon by Rev. Mr. Jessup. The Blues and the Grays sat together. Old memories were stirred. There is but one sentiment among them now and that is, "Our Country." This morning at 9 o'clock there will be an informal service at the cemetery and decoration of graves, participated in by Federals and Confederates. Those having flowers will please leave them at the court house early Tuesday morning.

THOSE THAT HAVE-GET BY A.T. WESTON

SEEK TO BREAK WILL

Relatives of the Late W. A. Wilgus After $40,000 He Left to the City.

Late Friday Afternoon the Suit Was Filed, Last Day.

W. A. WILGUS.

Distant relatives of Wm. A. Wilgus, who committed suicide Nov. 1, 1914, leaving an estate of $40,000 to T. W. Long which on Mr. Long's death three weeks later, descended by the terms of his will to the city, are seeking to break the will.

The estate was left to the city of Hopkinsville for providing public playgrounds for the white children. No grounds are set up further than that the will probated here "was not the last will and testament." Further, the petitioners pray that the city be adjudged to have no interest in the property whatever and that it be turned over to them. The will left all the property to Thomas W. Long, closest friend of the deceased, for his lifetime and at his death it was to be used for providing playgrounds. Mr. Long lived only a few weeks after Mr. Wilgus died. The suit is directed against George C. Long, administrator, and the city of Hopkinsville.

The plaintiffs, who live in several different states, are Sadie Wilgus Yeager, Lucy Wilgus Luxon, Parma Wilgus Bond, Tibbie Wilgus Prather, Lucy Nutter Dennie, Charles Wilgus, Willie Lee Nutter, who sues for himself and as next friend for three infants, Lucy Wilgus Freeman, Annie Wilgus and Sadie Wilgus; G. A. Wilgus, Mrs. L. B. Desper, Mrs. M. V. White, J. R. Thompson, Mrs. David Thompson, C. K. Grahm and Richard Kelly.

The will which it is sought to set aside was made some time before Mr. Wilgus' death and was a revision of a former will with some changes. It was written in his own hand and was deposited in his safety box at the First National Bank.

Mr. Thos. W. Long qualified as executor and a few days thereafter was taken ill and died Nov. 21, 1914. His brother, Geo. C. Long, was appointed to wind up the estate, which consists of real estate, stocks, bonds and notes.

DAMAGES ASKED.

J. B. Sherrill has sued the Hopkinsville Water company for $1,600 damages. He says that by the raising of the dam at Lake Tandy a tract of three acres of land belonging to him has been overflowed and a spring from which he got water for his stock and washing, etc., has been filled up and he believes permanently ruined.

WAITE OBJECTS TO WAITING.

Dr. Arthur W. Waite, tried for the poisoning of his wife's parents, was found guilty and will be sentenced to death in the electric chair June 1. "This is a great relief" was his only comment. "I am satisfied and am willing to take my punishment and the quicker it comes the better," he is quoted as saying. He will be sentenced Thursday.

VERDUN IS QUIET AGAIN

Artillery Duels Continue Without Further Offensive Moves.

RUSSIANS ARE ADVANCING

Austrians Pressing Italians Hard and Taking Prisoners.

London, May 29.—Only artillery bombardments have been in progress on the French front around Verdun. No infantry attacks have been made. Around Le Mort Homme, northwest of Verdun, and the sector west of the Thiaumont farm, northeast of the fortress, the bombardments have been violent. In the Argonne forest the French have captured craters caused by the explosion of German mines and in Alsace have put down an attempt of the Germans to advance. In the fighting of Saturday night the Germans in the Champagne region at several points penetrated the French line and took 100 prisoners.

Petrograd reports an attempt of the Germans in the Lake Drisviaty region to start an offensive. The movement was stopped by the concentrated artillery and infantry fire of the Russians. The Austrians are still on the offensive against the Italians in the region southeast of Trent, but Rome reports that whatever infantry attacks were started, Austrians met with repulse. On the Isonzo front at San Michele the Italians in mining operations destroyed Austrian trenches and took the defenders of them under their rifle fire as they fled.

Turkish contingents which tried to advance against the Russians on the Caucasus front in the region of Rivan-douza-Dergala, were repulsed by the Russians, according to Petrograd.

APPEAL FOR PROTECTION

Tell President Mexican Authorities at Tampico Trying to Drive Them Out.

Washington, May 29.—On the eve of the receipt of Gen. Carranza's new note which officials believe will renew the demand for withdrawal of American troops from Mexico and with another conference between American and Mexican military commanders about to begin, a protest was received at the white house today reporting serious difficulties between American oil operators at Tampico and the Mexican authorities.

The protest came in the form of a telegram addressed to President Wilson by 84 American citizens resident at Tampico, who had held a mass meeting and determined to lay their case before the government. They declared the Mexican military orders were promulgating decrees designed to make it impossible for Americans to do business in the country and told how one of their number had been arrested and imprisoned for three hours because he refused to pay his employees wages fixed by the authorities in excess of terms previously agreed upon with the men.

The signers of the messages asserted their right to protection from the American government and announced their determination not to comply with arbitrary and confiscatory orders and decrees by the Mexicans.

Eighteen persons were killed and a score of others injured in an air raid on Bari on the Italian Adriatic coast, according to a Reuter dispatch from Rome. The victims were largely women and children, the dispatch states.

Capital stock of banks will be assessed at 100 per cent. and the surplus and undivided stock at 80 per cent., State Auditor Greene has advised bankers, who sought to have the assessment valuation reduced to 80 per cent., where it stood before.

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it had appropriated $1,000,000 for war relief work in Poland, Serbia, Montenegro and Albania. The sum appropriated is to be expended at the discretion of the executive committee whenever satisfactory arrangements for the transportation of relief supplies can be effected.

Another conference of Mexican and American military commanders has been arranged. Secretary Baker announced that Gen. Pershing, heading the American expedition in Mexico, would meet Gen. Gavira, Carranza's commander, in Chihuahua at the latter's request to work out plans for closer co-operations. Gen. Funston has approved the proposal.

President Wilson is giving more serious consideration to the possibility of restoring peace to Europe than at any time since the outbreak of the war. From an authoritative source it was learned today that the president is preparing to do everything possible in an informal way to bring about the discussion of peace between belligerent nations, although he has not indicated his attention immediately to offer his services formally as mediator.

A censored dispatch from Berlin says: "Another visit by Colonel E. M. House to Europe would come as no surprise to initiated quarters here. The American rumors to this effect are regarded as having a certain basis in fact, although the opinion prevails that the trip would naturally be postponed until after the national conventions. It is hoped here that Col. House pay such a visit, he will come this time as a harbinger of peace, or at any rate, to prepare, if possible, the foundations for peace proposals, difficult as this task is recognized to be. The situation, it may be said, now has changed. Apparently there is no harm from either a political or a strategic standpoint, in saying that Germany would welcome peace."

The unprecedented fight against Louis D. Brandeis, one of the ablest Jews in America, for a place on the Supreme Court bench, is nearing an end. Victory for the administration in its fight to make Brandeis an associate justice of the supreme court is regarded as assured, the senate having agreed to vote on the nomination next Thursday, June 1. Leaders on both sides of the controversy agree that debate should not be extended but that the views of each side should be embodied in majority and minority reports to be made public after the vote. The vote, if there is a roll call, also will be made public. Republican senators, who have opposed Brandeis, concede that he will be confirmed beyond question; that he will receive practically unanimous democratic support and in addition get at least four republican votes. This will give approximately 60 votes in favor of confirmation, leaving 36 opposing. Some of the republicans said after a conference of minority members of the judiciary committee that it seemed so conclusive that Brandeis was to be elevated to the supreme bench that further prolonged debate over his qualification might be misconstrued.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Hopkinsville People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, languor and depression. Perhaps the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that may be the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys—assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no more highly recommended remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills.

Below is grateful testimony from a sufferer in this locality.

W. O. Freeman, railroad engineer, Cadiz, Ky., says: "My kidneys were weak for a long time, causing back ache and severe pains in my sides. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended by local people, I got a box and used them as directed. In a short time I was cured and now I seldom have any cause for complaint."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Freeman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Forest Notes.

It is estimated that automobiles carried to the Grand Canyon National Monument last year 20,000 persons, while the number of persons to reach the Canyon by railroad was 92,000, or five times as many as in 1914.

New Mexico official reports show that 360,325 cattle and 1,219,762 sheep were shipped out of that State in 1915. Most of this stock was grazed on public lands, especial the National Forests. On the Forest ranges the forage crop is as much an object of care as a result of scientific methods.

Approximately 85 per cent of the losses of cattle on the National Forest ranges due to poisonous plants is caused by tall larkspur. Death camas, lupine, laurel, sneeze weed and rubber weed are responsible for sheep losses from such cause, while the loco weed is the principal poisonous plant affecting horses. Last year the loss from these causes amounted to about $300,000.

That wild burros in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado are increasing rapidly is the report of a ranger on the Tusayan National Forest, who says the animals in their search for forage are finding their way to the top in such numbers as to constitute a nuisance. Already there are thousands of the animals in the Grand Canyon from Supai to the mouth of the Little Colorado, according to the Forest ranger.

WATER OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

Cows Giving Milk Require Great Quantities of Water—An Essential as Feed in Winter.

Water is fully as important to the dairy cows as feed during the winter. They must have access to it so that they can drink all they want, whether they have it in automatic water basins, or in the yard tanks.

Cows giving milk need great quantities of water. Careful experiments have proved that it requires more than five pounds of water for every pound of milk produced by the cow.

DAIRY NOTES

The milk crop is one which comes in every day.

When possible, test the cow's milk before buying her.

Never buy a cow whose milk tests below three per cent.

Stanchions are a thing of the past. Cow ties are now in order.

After the good cow is born there is lots of work in her making.

The sooner dairy tools are washed after using the more easily they will be cleaned.

Why not settle on dairy farming as a business? Then breed and feed and work for a better breed.

Don't use the milk pail for carrying feed to the pigs if you desire to be classed as a good dairyman.

The grade bull calf will not pay for the cost of raising if the dairyman can dispose of his products otherwise.

There's as much in the man behind the cow as in the cow herself. Brain count everywhere in dairying.

As a rule milk should not be used within 15 days before calving or during the first five days after calving.

You don't know much about your cows until you weigh their milk and test it with a Babcock tester. Keep records.

A CARD.

I desire to inform the public that I am now with the Waller & Trice Co., and, in the future, can be found at their establishment, where I am better prepared than ever before to handle any business entrusted to me in either the furniture or undertaking department. I wish to thank my friends for past favors and would be pleased to have them call on me at my new quarters.

Fizzle.

"What is it a sign of when one's lips fizzle?" asked the dear girl in the parlor scene as she lowered the blinds and seated her person on the end of a sofa built for two. "I don't know, I'm sure," replied the dense young man, as he folded his arms and tried to look wise, "but I presume it indicates some sort of a cutaneous trouble."—Indianapolis Star.

The Modern Spirit.

The modern spirit is not the spirit "which always denies," delighting only in destruction; still less is it that which builds castles in the air rather than not construct; it is that spirit which works and will work, "without haste and without rest," gathering harvest after harvest of truth into its horns and devouring error with unquenchable fire.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by

SYNOPSIS

MARY PAGE, an actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock, and is defended by her lover Philip Langdon. Pollock has been pursuing Mary for many months endeavoring to win her love and her hand in marriage, but his attentions have been very unwelcome to her.

Knowing her stage aspirations, he has, unknown to her, financed her starring tour under the management of Daniels.

On the night of the murder, Mary leaves the banquet hall in the Hotel Republic and enters the Gray Room alone expecting to meet Langdon. She has been lured there by Pollock, who has been drinking.

A few moments later a shot is heard and Langdon and others, upon entering the Gray Room find James Pollock shot through the heart and Mary Page lying in a faint beside him with Pollock's revolver not six inches from the ends of her fingers.

At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Pollock had invaded her dressing room at the theatre, Langdon had come to her rescue, the revolver had been knocked from Pollock's hand and Mary had seized and retained it. She had put it in her hand bag the night of the murder intending giving it to Langdon.

Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon.

How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder.

Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary.

The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide.

Nurse Walton describes the kidnapping of Mary by Pollock, and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her and of another occasion when the smell of liquor drove Mary insane.

There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky.

Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill Langdon.

Two witnesses describe Mary's flight to the street from the hotel and her abduction by men from a gambling place near by. Further evidence seems to incriminate Daniels.

Maggie Hale, inmate of a gambling den, testifies that she was at the hotel and heard two men quarreling in the Gray Room a short time before the murder. Her evidence seems to increase suspicion against Daniels.

Daniels privately informs Langdon that Mary Page did not kill Pollock and that if Mary is in danger of going to the electric chair he will tell all he knows of the case.

Watson, a waiter, testifies that Pollock had a quarrel over the phone the night of the murder, and Pollock's chauffeur reveals the fact that Shale was with Pollock shortly before the shot was fired.

"Call Mr. Daniels."

A sense of something big impending stirred the spectators and the jury alike, and the Judge himself, keenly alive to that new note in Langdon's voice, turned deliberately in his chair as Daniels began his testimony.

Everyone in the room leaned forward, tense with excitement.

"Mr. Daniels," began Langdon with no preliminaries, "on the night of the lock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky. Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill Langdon. Two witnesses describe Mary's flight to the street from the hotel and her abduction by men from a gambling place near by. Further evidence seems to incriminate Daniels.

"Yes. But I—don't remember what happened."

"What did you do?"

"I slipped off the cloak again because it was warm and laid it on a chair with my gloves and bag."

"Where was that chair?"

"The question snapped like a whip lash, and for a moment Mary hesitated."

"I'm not quite sure," she said slowly; then, with more assurance: "Why, yes, I am! It was towards the door into the other room because it was then that I saw Mr. Pollock come out."

"And you retreated?"

"Yes." The answer was breathed rather than spoken, but Langdon pushed on, too eager to spare her.

"Did he come toward you?"

"Yes."

"Did he follow you so far that he came between you and that chair?"

"Why, of course. He—he—came right up to me."

She shuddered and hid her face in her hands, as the tide of recollection swept over her, but Langdon had only one more question.

"Then, in order to secure the revolver from your bag, you would have had to push past him and secure the bag from under your cloak, would you not?"

"Yes. But I—I—don't remember what happened."

"That is all, thank you, Miss Page," said Langdon, and turning to the bailiff he added briskly:

when heard Miss Page's voice instead of the one I expected."
"What voice did you think it was?"
"That of a man named Shale. 'Jim's jackal,' we call him to call him."
"Mr. Daniels, do you know of any reason why Mr. Pollock should threaten to send this man Shale 'up'?"
"Well, Pollock told me once that he had 'got the goods' on Shale for some shady work that would easily send him to prison, and that he kept him out of jail because he was useful."
"Mr. Daniels, have you seen Mr. Shale since the death of Mr. Pollock?"
"Yes, I have."
"When?"
"The—the day before I came back home. I ran into him on the street."

"Daniels has enticed. Well he can't prove anything."

We had a talk, and he told me that—he thought he could get me fresh hacking for The Covington."

"Did he see you again?"

"Yes. A few days ago he came to me and told me that a syndicate had been formed and had raised the money to put on a musical comedy, and that I was to be manager of the theater and look after the financial interests of the syndicate. He was very nice to me."

"Mr. Daniels," Langdon's voice became suddenly grave and freighted with meaning, "did Shale know you had heard his voice in that hotel room?"

"Yes. I asked him if he had been there."

"What did he say?"

"He said I couldn't testify to what I wasn't sure of, and that it was wiser not to ask too many questions."

"Did you understand that the backing for your theatre was in order to keep you from testifying?"

"I object!" cried the district attorney, on his feet in an instant.

There was much wrangling as to whether this question could be admitted; but the Judge finally ruled that it was material evidence.

"It was never put into words, Mr. Langdon, though I gathered it," the witness said. "But there are some bigger things than business success, and I wanted to set this straight."

A sudden commotion arose at the back of the room, and as the spectators turned and stared, and the Judge's gavel rapped for order a man's voice rose shrill and exasperated.

"So that's what you've got me here for, is it? Daniels has enticed. Well he can't prove anything—I tell you he don't know nothin'."

A pallid-faced man in a light-checked suit was struggling in the grip of Brennan and a policeman, who drew him steadily down through the gaping crowds as Langdon called his next witness.

"George Shale."

"I won't testify!" stormed the newcomer, twisting angrily under the by no means light handling of the detectives. "What do you want of me?"

"I shall tell you that when you are on the stand," said Langdon briefly, and his Honor, leaning forward, said sharply:

"A refusal to testify is contempt of court. You can be sent to prison for that."

For a moment Shale stared wildly about, then his eyes narrowed shrewdly, and he said gruffly, "All right," and allowed himself to be led up into the stand.

The excitement of the spectators can be imagined.

Here was drama of the most thrilling kind—an unwilling witness in a sensational murder trial, dragged to the stand, forced to open his sealed lips and tell what he knew.

"Mr. Shale," cried Langdon, "what had James Pollock asked you to do for him on the night when he was shot?"

"He asked me to get him the grey suite at the Republic. He wanted to get Miss Page in there for a quiet chat—so he said."

"Yes. But I was kind of sore, because a man gets tired playin' errand boy for a guy that's dead crazy about a skirt."

"What were you doing on the fire-escape?"

The question came so sharply that it held the whole room tense with its unexpectedness; but Shale did not wince. "Jim told me to get out there, and keep an eye out for anybody likely to hurt in. He knew you could reach the different rooms by it."

"Isn't it true that you and James Pollock quarreled that night?"

Shale blanched.

"Yes, it's true," he said hoarsely. "Jim was a devil when he was drunk."

His face was beaded with perspiration and his hand gripped the edge of the witness stand till the knuckles showed lividly.

He tried to look angry, but he succeeded only in being tragically ridiculous.

Suddenly Langdon softened his voice. "Where were you when Miss Page came into the room?"

"On the fire-escape, standing flattened against the wall, so that anybody looking at the steps wouldn't see me."

"Why did you re-enter the room?"

Shale moistened his dry lips, then with a gust of defiance flung up his head.

"I went in because Jim called me," he said loudly. "The girl had gone hysterical. She was laughin' and shriekin', and he calls to me, 'For God's sake, Shale, see if she's got any smelly salts or anything in that bag.'"

"And when you opened that bag you found a revolver, didn't you?" Langdon's voice rang out triumphantly. "George Shale, what did you do with that revolver?"

For a moment the man swayed as he stood; then he laughed and flung his hands wide.

"I shot him with it!" he shrieked. "I shot him! I didn't intend to do it, but he was a dirty dog. He had threatened me again that very night. He struck me—he called me his jackal—and when I saw the gun—I knew my chance had come. I took it out and walked around and said, 'Here's your smelly salts—and when he turned to take it I shot him. Oh, my God—'

He broke off with a storm of gasping sobs.

Everyone in the room was on his feet.

Even the Judge had risen.

Mary herself was standing swaying like some lovely lily, the light of a wondrous joy shining in her eyes, while her lips murmured over and over, "Philip—Philip—Philip!"

Then, high above the turmoil rose the voice of the District Attorney:

"George Shale, you are hereby declared under arrest, to be held to await the action of the Grand Jury!"

Again pandemonium broke out but fell to silence when Mary, her eyes drenched with happy tears, cried softly:

"What's to become of me now?"

"Your Honor," Langdon's voice was exultantly happy, and his hand caught and clung to Mary's, "Your Honor, the defendant desires to know what is to become of her?"

"She is discharged," answered his Honor with a smile, and made no effort to stem the cheers that rose, all there."

"What did he say?"

"He said I couldn't testify to what I wasn't sure of, and that it was wiser not to ask too many questions."

"Did you understand that the backing for your theatre was in order to keep you from testifying?"

"I object!" cried the district attorney, on his feet in an instant.

"And you never suspected?" she asked at last, and Philip shook his head. "Not Shale," he said. "I was looking for someone else."

"Now don't talk any more about it," said Mrs. Page quietly. "Tomorrow, Mary, I am going to take you back to the country, and keep you until you have put this dreadful thing out of your mind forever."

"And then," said Mary wistfully, "I will come back and take up my work."

Langdon tightened his arm about her.

"And then," said he, "you will come back and marry me. A fee is always paid a lawyer for services rendered. I ask the biggest one in the world, Mary—will you pay it?"

And what her low-voiced reply was not even her mother knew.

THE END.

Advice.

Advice is a valued but egotistical attempt to show your neighbor how you surpass him intellectually. It is a magnifying glass which you hand to him, after which you make certain that you are standing at the proper focal distance.

Advice is also used as a sugar coating for criticism, as a diplomatic method of checking offensive conduct and as a pastime.

There are two classes of people ebullient with a desire to give advice—those who have had experience and those who have not.

A request for advice is usually a subtle form of flattery or else a method of dodging responsibility.

The person who is wise enough to take good advice and the one who is too wise to give it generally tie the knot of perfect friendship.

Advice is a drug on the market. The principal reason why the supply exceeds the demand is because those who need the most take the least.

Advice should never be followed. If it is good advice it cannot be followed. The only advice which is good is that which drives you.—Judge.

Every One Was Satisfied.

A very angry client entered a New York lawyer's office. He had called upon a debtor and asked him politely to pay a bill of $2.50 and had been abused for his pains. Now he wanted the lawyer to collect it.

The lawyer demurred. The bill was so small that it would cost the whole amount to collect it.

"No matter," said the angry one. "I don't care if I don't get a cent as long as that fellow has to pay it!"

So the lawyer wrote the debtor a letter, and in a day or two the latter appeared in high dudgeon. He did not owe any $2.50, and he would not pay.

"Very well," said the lawyer; "then my instructions are to sue. But I should hardly think it would pay you to stand a suit for so small a sum."

"Who will get the money if I pay it?" asked the man.

The lawyer was obliged to confess that he should.

"Very well," said the debtor; "that's another matter. If Smith isn't going to get it I am perfectly willing to pay it."—Youth's Companion.

Chinese Schools.

Each Chinese schoolboy has to furnish his own stool and table for school work as well as the "four precious articles," which are the ink slab, a cake of India ink, a brush for writing and paper. With these he begins his weary task of learning to write and read the thousands of Chinese characters.

These are to open the way to the Chinese classics, and a knowledge of this ancient literature and wisdom means education to the Chinese. At the opening of a Chinese school a paper on which is written the name of the ancient Chinese sage, Confucius, is pasted on the wall. Before this honored name the pupils and masters burn paper money and incense and bow their heads three times to the floor. The master then tells Confucius the day, the month and the year the school is opened and begs for his favor. Every morning when the pupils arrive they must bow twice, once for the master and once for Confucius.

Proved It.

"Whenever I see Grilbliss I am reminded that the good die young," said a business man one day.

"But Grilbliss is over seventy," said his friend.

"Exactly," was the reply. "That is just my point."—Chicago Herald.

CONFESSION

WITH his hands clasped behind his back and his brows bent in a frown that made him look oddly old and tired, Langdon paced slowly up and down. Over and over in his mind he went back through the testimony of the long trial of Mary Page. He was confident now, as he had not been confident in the beginning, that she had not shot James Pollock in a frenzy of delirious fear.

But who HAD killed him? That was the problem!

Never in all his experience had he remembered so baffling a case.

At least a half dozen times he had felt that his fingers were at last upon

"I did."

Langdon was tiding his questions like shells from a gun.

NEW LIFE FOR EGYPT

COUNTRY BECOMING A GRANARY FOR THE NATIONS.

Skillful Work of Irrigating Engineers Has Done Wonders for Land That Has Long Been Looked Upon as a Desert Waste.

From a forbidding, sun-glazed, poverty-stricken wasteland, farmed where naturally fertile barely for a frugal daily fare, into a land of numerous farms and plantations, of ever-extending irrigation nets and increasing profusions of green and gold and russet vegetation, is the story of Egypt's progress under European leadership during the past generation. Where the fame of Egypt of old was for thugery and revolution, the modern land was earning renown as a wonderful winter playground for tourists and as England's kitchen garden, says a statement given out by the National Geographic society at Washington, which discusses the Nile-land as the granary, vegetable garden, orchard and poultry yard to the great congested centers to the Northwest.

The long, fruitful farm that follows the Nile banks through hundreds of miles of desert, and spreads out over the wide delta today, with the people of the most productive countries in the world in trenches and in training camps, has come into first rank importance as a source of foodstuffs. For the past 30 years the progress of Nile control and of great irrigation projects has been preparing the country for strong competition in all of the larger produce markets of Europe. The number of farm holdings has grown to about 1,000,000 in a land with a population of 11,000,000. These holdings include 5,500,000 acres of land.

And there is labor a-plenty in the country for the development of every square rod of area reclaimed; for Egypt is one of the most densely settled lands in the world. Its habitable area is given as 12,026 square miles, and its density of population at 939 persons per square mile. Belgium, before the war the most thickly settled country in Europe, had a density of 539 per square mile. The enormous growth in agricultural resources has stimulated in Egypt an increase of population equaled by few other lands in Old World areas besides Germany. Cities, villages, roads, railways and canals have sprung up out of the profits of the Nile bonanza farm.

At the time the war broke out irrigation projects were in prospect that would have reclaimed nearly 2,000,000 acres more of land. The cost of all of these works had been estimated at something more than $100,000,000. Cotton was first of the plantation crops, with an apparently glowing future before it. Rice was the principal grain export, being sold abroad at a value of about $1,250,000. Fresh eggs on the London breakfast tables were largely Egyptians, the value of this product taken each year by Great Britain averaging around $600,000. There were also important quantities of fancy Egyptian vegetables sold in London markets, and a thriving cane-sugar industry was in the course of upbuilding.

Moreover, agricultural Egypt just began to gather headway during the past ten years. It was just beginning to realize a fraction of the production that a proper development of its lands could be expected to bring about. Its out-of-season vegetables, grown at a time when the fields of Europe's great vegetable gardens still lie frost-bound, had enjoyed scarce half a decade of demand in northern markets, though they compared in quality with the fancy vegetables, the first aristocracy of vegetable foods, grown on the little garden plots in Northern France and in Belgium, the coaxed and coddled cultivations of zealous small gardeners. Egypt gave promise of becoming England's fairest farm.

Bathtub Under Sink.

"By utilizing the space ordinarily wasted beneath a kitchen sink as a place of concealment for a bathtub, a curious plan has been evolved for providing bathing facilities in cramped houses without toilet rooms," says Popular Mechanics Magazine. "The sink and its accompanying drain-board occupy the top of a movable cabinet of neat appearance. The backboard of this is permanently fixed to a wall, and water faucets are attached to it immediately over the sink. The bathtub is permanently installed beneath the cabinet and at the front end supports a small basin, connected with the waste pipe, into which the water from the sink is drained. Normally the bathtub is entirely out of sight. When it is to be used, however, the cabinet, holding the sink, is moved away from the wall to give free access to it. Water is then supplied through faucets attached to the board above."

Thief Quotes the Bible.

A religious grape thief defended his thefts when he tacked to the fence of C. A. Parker, a vineyardist, a quotation from the Bible as follows: "When thou comest into thy neighbor's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel."

Numerous complaints have been made to the sheriff's office about people stripping the vines of grapes. Parker was one of the last to complain, and now the thief has justified his act. — Fresno (Cal.) Dispatch.

FORTUNATE OF EARTH

ARE THOSE WITH WHOM CHILDREN ARE CONFIDENTIAL.

Probably the Most Precious Gift That the Fairies Bestow and It is Not Given to the Majority of Mankind.

It is very likely a fairy gift, and if you haven't it there is little hope of your ever getting it. If you have it, however, you are the most fortunate sort of all sorts of fortunate folks. You are the sort that the children talk to in the street. And the reason that the person the children talk to in the street is so very fortunate is that they tell him things that nobody else ever hears, and very good things to hear, at that. From that fact it is easy to understand that this talk of theirs is no more "good morning" or "hello" sort of conversation. It is real talk about real things, although, to be sure, it is only the fortunate person who hears it that can really understand it.

They begin very abruptly, these children, and the beginning may be in the middle or at either end of a thing. It does not matter. The talk may start something like this, entirely unexpected or unsolicited on the fortunate person's part: "You'd think they'd fall out anyway, if you did think anybody grew on the moon, wouldn't you?" And it may lead anywhere.

Sometimes it is much more personal than that. You may meet a small boy armed with a toy gun and a sword and he may begin, "You'll have to run for it," meaning the street car, "but if you ain't got any better luck than me you'll miss it anyway. I bet I got the worst luck of anybody, and I bet I've found the most horse shoes. If I had good luck I'd been a girl and then I wouldn't have to fight all the time." And this is probably from the terror of his neighborhood, a boy who is supposed by teachers and neighbors and parents, to exist solely for the joy of battle.

If you are the fortunate sort of person, you will be stopped and consulted about everything the children are doing. It may be cold and almost dark, and you may be hurrying home to supper, but if you are the right one, the little girl who is contemplating the snow woman, a plump stylish creature with full skirts and a hat with a feather, will call to you without a doubt of your sympathy, to know whether or not you don't think "she is just a little cross-eyed."

"It's the newsboy's fault," she explains, "he poked her in the eye and it ain't been right since. I could take a couple of buttons off her waist, they're only walnuts, and make her some other eyes just to match, but she is getting so sloppy."

They may run after you to tell you a bit of gossip about their "friends," imaginary friends that nobody else ever heard of. They may trot along with you repeating the most astonishing conversations that they have had with squirrels or bears or stars or policemen. And it is all true. It is all because they believe it, and it is the expression of their queer little selves.

Justice, Then Prosperity.

The difference between the men in office now in city, in state and in federal government, and those men in office 20 years ago, in those rather narrow but controlling areas of our politics where there are actually marked differences, lies not in matters of honesty, not in matters of capacity, not in matters of party faith. The real difference is found in their philosophy of life, William Allen White writes in the New York Independent. The political leaders of majorities in the eighties and nineties of the last century believed in business for itself, that prosperity was an end of itself. Today our governments, city, state and national, are more or less under the control of men who all profess, and who in the main believe that justice is more important than prosperity. And the politicians are only taking their cure from the people. A sense of justice—with here a backset, and there a reaction—is growing steadily and overwhelmingly in the American heart.

Zeppelins Built Since the War.

According to a dispatch from Berne, Switzerland, there are now some eighty Zeppelins in the German service. This statement is said to be based on information developed at Friedrichshafen, where the airship works are located. Recently one of the latest type Zeppelins made a trial flight. It bore the number LZ-95, and in design varied considerably from the anti-hellum Zeppelins. Its gondolas are said to be of plated steel. The craft is plentifully supplied with machine guns and apparatus for throwing bombs and aerial torpedoes; among the latter being a new type which is reported to be far more powerful than any heretofore developed. In fact, rumor has it that the new aerial torpedo is to play a prominent part in the event of the German warships and Zeppelins coming out from their sheltering harbors and engaging in battle with the British fleet in the North sea.—Scientific American.

HER FIVE GRANDSONS.

Five stalwart grandsons spent Sunday with Mrs. M. G. Rust; some of them coming in without previous notice. They were James Moss, of Georgetown college, who came home from school to go to work for the Meacham Contracting Co., at Rock Island, Tenn., and his younger brother, Ray Moss, a student here; John and William Rust, sons of Mrs. John O. Rust, of Nova Scotia and Thomas Rust Underwood, a student of State University, who is home for a short visit before returning to Lexington to work for the Leader for a month, taking the place of Edward Danforth, who has gone to Atlanta to accept a newspaper position.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

College Girls Athletics.

A recent observer of the women's colleges reports a tremendous growth in interest in athletic exercises. Formerly the college girl might play croquet, and a few of the more strenuous tried tennis. That was about all. Their sporting fields were called recreation grounds, and even the word "athletic" was considered unladylike.

Today the college girls are playing baseball, polo, basketball, lacross, they have swimming and hockey and about everything but football. Inter-collegiate sports have become common.

The time may even come when women will compete with men in these sports on even terms. When you consider how women of primitive ages did the hardest of manual labor, there seems no reason why women may not before many years acquire physical strength equal to men. It would be a terrible blow to some of the men's colleges to be beaten by the girls. Yet the latter will keep training rules better, and will think quicker. There may be a dreadful downfall one of these days for the kings of sport.—Ex.

PRESIDENT WILSON SENDS PHOTO

The Kentuckian's Page of Presidents Will Prove Interesting. The Contest With a $15 Prize Will Create a Diversion.

One of the "Page of Presidents," similar to that which will soon appear in the Kentuckian was sent to President Wilson, and he was asked to give an expression of what he thought about the feature. He said he thought it "quite a unique advertising feature, as it would cause people to resort to history and encyclopedia to refresh their memories."

He was asked to send a late photo from which to have a cut made to be used on the page. He sent what he claimed he thought was the best picture of himself.

Colonel Roosevelt was the youngest of any president when elected, age forty-three. Grant comes next—forty-six, and Grover Cleveland forty-seven. Virginia, with President Wilson, has furnished eight men to be president of the United States, and is still called the mother of presidents. North Carolina furnished three and all three were elected from and died and are buried in Tennessee.

The Kentuckian's "Page of Presidents" will be found a winner for the live advertiser, as he will have many readers of the paper to tell him they read his ad. All who wish to contest for the $15 prize should read these notices in order that they will not fail to catch the day this interesting page will appear.

Mexicans Catch Four.

Four bandit leaders, including Juan J. Castro, a former Villa colonel, and Col. Chavez, who have operated largely in Durango, have been captured and imprisoned in Torreon, according to reports to Gen. Jacinto Trevino, military commander of northern Mexico. Dispatches from Gen. Samuel De Los Santos asked for orders as to their disposition.

IN INDUSTRY ITS STRENGTH

Economical Might of the United States
Shown by Its Per Capita Consumption of Coal.

The index of a country's industrial standing, as formerly recognized, was its consumption of sulphuric acid, the nation that produced and consumed the most of this chemical substance in her arts and industries being accounted the most prosperous; and, judged by this standard, Great Britain was for a long time reckoned the leading nation of the world. According to the Scientific American, however, a new and more accurate standard is now employed—a nation's coal consumption per capita; and, judged by this standard, the United States, with a per capita consumption of five tons, stands at the head, outclassing both Great Britain and Germany, who are second in the scale, with an equal consumption of four tons per capita.

France stands third, being credited with a consumption of only 1.6 tons, while Russia, with its abundant population and great extent of territory, is away down on the scale of industrial progress, having only one-quarter ton per capita to her credit.

These figures are convincing of the fact that the United States has a preponderating advantage over other countries in the strength of its industries, the most important consideration in the question of preparedness for war or peace.

ICE BILL AN EXTRAVAGANCE

America's Annual Consumption, It is Declared, Nearly Matches Rest of the World.

One of our little extravagances which has grown into a mountain is ice. The amount of ice an American consumes and wastes is prodigious.

Not counting the natural ice harvested for the millions of our rural population, machines last year made 450 pounds of ice for everybody. Each of us uses a half more ice now than he did six years ago. Our annual ice bill is away above the nation's debt when Washington became president. And see how it is wasted! Ask your hotel or club waiter for a glass of water and what do you get?

A tumblerful of ice. It seems as if the trust were forever at your elbow shoveling ice into your glass. Years ago someone wrote that it cost $10,000 a year to have ice water in every room in the house.

Since then ice poured over us in an ever-rising glacier. America's ice bill nearly matches that for the rest of the world.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

They determined to wait for the half-price sales to buy it. They would save much money thereby.

So, when the sales were announced they started out to find a child's bed and mattress.

Everywhere the price was too high. Finally only two stores were left. At the first one a charming little bed was found—and the price was right, too, but the price of the mattress was rather exorbitant, they felt.

So, away to the last remaining store they went. There they found the same mattress—and it was 50 cents less in price than the next-to-the last store had asked.

Then they saw the bed—the same bed as in the other store—but 50 cents higher in price.

CUT DOWN THE DEATH RATE

Improved Handling of Military Hospitals Is Reported to Have Had Most Gratifying Results.

Amidst the never-ceasing reports of the tremendous loss of life occasioned by the present European war there has been a growing curiosity to know just how many of the wounded who are brought back to the hospitals recover. In previous wars, where the instruments of death were less thorough, it was known that the death rate in military hospitals was about 30 per cent.

Dr. Jacques Bertillon, who is in charge of the medico-surgical statistics for the entire French army, has just stated that the mortality at present is only 2 per cent. His figures, made up and averaged from the reports from all French military hospitals, at last give an authoritative answer to American queries. He says: "Out of every 100 patients at present being received and treated at our hospitals 98 are sent away on recovery."

Toward the first of the war the mortality was 4.5 per cent, he states, but since the improvement of the medical service and the discovery of a remarkable number of new treatments the advantage of science has been materially increased.

VIRTUE REWARDED.

The teacher had told the pupils the story of Washington and his little hatchet, and had then shown them an engraving which depicted two small boys standing in a repentant attitude, "explaining things to mother."

The title of the picture was "The Truth-Tellers," and the children were asked to write a composition thereon.

This was little Johnnie's effort: "One day mother left me in the house all alone. Pretty soon Tommy Jones came along and said let's go swimming. My mother won't let me. Ah, come on. So I went. When mother came back she said what makes your hair so wet. I said mother I cannot tell a lie I went swimming. And she said Johnnie I'm glad you took a bath."—Life.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

MOTTLED BUTTER IN WINTER

Defect is One of Workmanship and Can Be Overcome by Application of Proper Methods.

(From Weekly News Letter United States Department of Agriculture.)

Mottled butter is frequently found on the market at this time of the year, and even though it may be of very good flavor, it is strongly discriminated against by the purchaser. As this defect is one of workmanship, it can be overcome by the application of proper methods on the part of the buttermaker.

Mottles are caused primarily by an uneven distribution of salt in the butter. This may be produced by insufficient working of the butter or by churning, washing and working it at a very low temperature, or by washing or working it at a temperature several degrees higher or lower than the churning temperature.

When the quantity of butter made in one churning is much less than usual, it is necessary to work it a greater number of revolutions of the churn than usual in order to produce the same results on the butter.

Extremely low temperatures of churning, washing and working should be avoided, because they produce so firm a butter that it is only with great difficulty that the salt can be worked uniformly into it. High temperatures of churning, washing and working must be avoided to prevent an abnormal loss of fat in the buttermilk and also the making of a greasy, leaky butter.

Great variations in temperature during the manufacturing process should always be avoided. Under normal conditions the temperature of the wash water should be the same as, or within two degrees of, that of the buttermilk.

When the churn room is so cold that the butter becomes chilled before working is completed, mottled butter is frequently the result. To prevent this it is preferable to increase the amount of working rather than to raise the temperature of the wash water. Mottled butter, then, may be prevented by using methods that will insure a uniform distribution of salt.

SUPPORT FOR A MILK BOTTLE

Recently Invented Device Holds Vessel in Such Position That It May Be Thoroughly Drained.

Milk Bottle Drainer.

drain with the mouth portion open or free, and whereby the bottle may be filled in position to be collected by the milkman if desired. While especially designed for use in connection with milk bottles, the device is not so limited in use.

DAIRY NOTES

Consider records more than appearance in buying a cow.

The sun dispels foul odors and makes the air sweet and wholesome.

There is more money in a good milk than in any other man on the farm.

Be sure that the calves get all the sunshine that is coming to them this winter.

Thorough milking tends to develop a cow's udder and increase her milk capacity.

Train the youngsters to lead. No heifer should reach her first birthday unbroken to the halter.

The brush and comb are just as necessary to dairy success in winter as the milk pail and scales.

Where more than two cows are milked, the calves should not be allowed to suck after the first day.

Few schemes of farming can succeed with the cow eliminated, and the better the cow the larger the profits.

If you curry the old cow with the milking stool, don't get mad if she massages you in the ribs with her hind leg.

Orchard Information

GUARD AGAINST INSECT PEST

Practice of Fall Plowing and Burning All Rubbish Will Lessen Number of Harmful Bugs.

It is much easier to ward off an attack of insects or to make conditions unfavorable for their multiplication than to destroy them after they are once in possession. Certain methods of control have long been recognized among farmers and horticulturists.

Control by cultural methods must come first, for insecticides can only stop an injury already begun. Insects thrive on neglect, multiply most rapidly in land seldom or never cultivated, and winter over in rubbish, prunings or the undisturbed soil where they get their food. It is the neglected farm, vineyard or orchard, filled with weeds or wild growth, which is certain to contain the greatest stock of insect enemies.

Thorough and constant culture, with the removal and burning of rubbish, diseased fruit, etc., with the practice of fall plowing, will almost certainly lessen the number of destructive insects. Constant cropping of large areas of land year after year to the same staple is largely responsible for the excessive loss from insects in this country as compared with Europe. A most valuable cultural plan, therefore, is a system of rotation of crops.

LOCATION FOR FRUIT GARDEN

Plant All Trees in Straight and Even Rows—Wire Netting Affords Protection From Vermin.

The fruit garden may be adjoining the vegetable garden, but should not be a part of it.

Plant all trees in straight, even rows. Standard apple trees 40 feet apart each way.

Standard pears 25 feet apart each way. Peaches and plums and morello cherries 20 feet apart each way. A peach or sour cherry tree may be planted in between the rows of apples, as the apples will not shade these trees for six or eight years.

After planting two-year-old trees, stake and tie the trees to the stakes. To prevent injury to the trees, it is well to run a piece of wire netting around each tree and tie it securely to the stakes. The wire netting should be four feet in height. This will afford protection from vermin and also from careless cultivation.

Low-growing vegetables may be planted in between the rows of trees. Give thorough culture throughout the season. No grass or weeds should be allowed to grow around the trees. Keep the ground mellow.

SPRAYING FOR INSECT PESTS

Automatic Machine Shown in Illustration Designed Especially for the Smaller Orchards.

Spraying becomes more popular every year, not only for apples, peaches, and other orchard fruit, but for potatoes, garden and even field crops as the farming business comes to recognize the value of fighting pests that cut off the profits. For the one-man orchardist and gardener the automatic spraying machine shown in the illustration is especially designed, though the automatic idea will likely be seen soon on larger sprayers. As the sprayer is wheeled along it automatically pumps the material to be sprayed through the hose line, and the man wheeling the machine along like a wheelbarrow can pass around a tree or bush, spraying it as he trundles the barrow.

Well-Known Spray.

Some people have been looking for a better and cheaper spray than arsenate of lead and have been trying arsenate of zinc. It is advisable to go a little slow in this matter because so far arsenate of zinc has been found to be much more dangerous to both fruit and foliage and also fully as costly. Arsenate of lead has been used for a long time, for its strength and character is known to practically everybody.

Frost Protection Pays.

Does frost protection pay? Judging by the experience of the citrus fruit-growers in California, it seems quite apparent that it does, that it is one of the greatest factors in assuring a fruit crop, and that while the expense of equipping an orchard is considerable, it pays dividends that are almost fabulous.

Orchard Is Neglected.

Many good farmers will keep everything on the place in ship shape all the year except the orchard. These men are always complaining that it doesn't pay to raise fruit.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH NO. 84

Native Son of Hopkinsville
Who Has Come to the Front.

HUGO HISGEN.

Here we have a native son of Hopkinsville who didn't come here and isn't going away. In this series of sketches it has been very seldom that a man has been found who was "to the manor born." Most of the successful men of Hopkinsville are either country boys, or business men who came from other cities in search of business opportunities.

Hugo Hisgen was born in Hopkinsville Oct. 2, 1871, the second son of Chas. H. Hisgen, a Union soldier of German descent who came here from Evansville soon after the war. His father is still living, the oldest painter in the city. For more than half a century he has lived in the city and has raised three sons to follow in his footsteps as painters of the finest inherited and acquired skill and taste.

Hugo as a boy learned under his father how to manipulate the brush, then went with the Forbes Company and held down a responsible place in their paint department for 13 years. Seven years ago, with ample experience, he became a contractor himself in all kinds of painting, decorating and papering. His business has grown so rapidly that he now works eight or ten men and has handled some of the biggest contracts in the city. One of these was the interior of Hotel Latham a year or two ago. Many fine residences all over the city attest the high quality of his workmanship.

Mr. Hisgen is married and lives with his family, consisting of a wife and one daughter, at 508 West Seventh street. In addition to his other business he conducts a fashionable boarding house. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church, the Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World. He deserves to rank among the successful young men of the city, one of those who has won by merit alone.

TELEPHONE CO SUED.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Green have sued the Christian-Todd Telephone company and the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph company for $575 damage they claim has been done to a piece of land belonging to them near sinking Fork. It is charged employees of the companies sued entered upon the land of the defendants and cut down trees worth $75 and that they also appropriated a right of way across the land for a telephone line, set poles, strung lines and guy wires, which damaged them $500.

Elkton Pastor Resigns.

Elkton, Ky., May 26.—The Rev. C. L. Hammock has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Elkton Baptist church, to become effective July 1. He has accepted a call as pastor of the Baptist church at Mulberry, Fla.

TOLD BY FARMERS.

R. H. McGaughey, Newstead, Ky.—Strange things happened with me last week. A hen was setting on the floor of my stock barn, in one of the unused apartments, set apart for sows and pigs. A sow was turned into the pen and soon discovered the hen in her secluded corner, almost ready to hatch, and broke up her eggs. The hen continued to set around the place where the nest had been a day or two until a litter of young pigs turned up where she was expecting chicks. As soon as the sow left her bed to be fed the hen promptly took possession of the pigs and hovered them until driven off. Since that time," said Mr. McGaughey with a perfectly straight face, "the sow and hen have taken it time about mothering the pigs. Of course, you know, the pigs rely altogether on the sow for nourishment, but the hen helps to keep them warm."

A. M. Henry, Newstead, Ky.—I challenge the world to produce a more prolific mintbed than one I have in my garden. It has stood the onslaughts of Jeff Morgan's Bluegrass excursionists and other similar large delegations, but still produces a crop that seems to be growing two inches a day. I notice that Alex Casey is headed this way with a bunch of sightseers Tuesday and his itinerary passes my gate. I want all hands to stop and see this famous mint bed and tests its superior flavoring qualities."

J. T. Garnett, Casky, Ky.—"I have a little strawberry patch that contains about one-sixteenth of an acre that is doing pretty well this season. The berries began to ripen about a week and a half ago and every day since we have gathered from 15 to 30 gallons a day and the picking is still good." Let's figure a little, Tom, was the mild protest. For 10½ days 30 gallons a day would be 315 gallons on one-sixteenth of an acre. On a whole acre it would be 5040 gallons and you say "picking is still good." But he stuck to the story, even after being told that John Keeling's brag yield on one acre was 1600 gallons for the entire season. As a final proof he added: "If anybody doubts it I can show the patch the berries were gathered from."

W. E. Forgy, Pembroke, Ky.—"Got a little patch of alfalfa on one of my farms that promises a satisfactory yield. Sowed the 22nd of last August and on May 23rd cut 42,500 pounds of cured hay. When the mower went through it a close observer could see a part of the bodies of the mules above the 44-inch alfalfa. In five weeks I am going to cut the main crop, which will be a good deal better. Then in August I will cut it again before using it as a fall pasture. I expect it to last without further sowing for 25 years. I am succeeding so well with it that I will sow 20 acres more next August. So far it has cost me $11 an acre for labor and acid phosphate. I got my money back on the first crop cut on one acre. The rest will be velvet. I think I'm going to like alfalfa."

GOATING DOWN SASSAFRAS.

Christian county, which, we believe, is rated by the Federal Department of Agriculture one of the most progressive counties in America, is the scene of experiments with goats as destroyers of sassafras bushes. In some parts of Kentucky everything that is left untilled or ungrubbed reverts to sassafras. The grubbing ax is one of the most necessary farming implements. As labor gets more costly, and laborers more wary of the more taxing forms of farm labor, it becomes increasingly difficult to get the sassafras grubbed out of the pastures often enough and thoroughly enough to keep the wilderness from reclaiming its own. Grubbing sassafras is like shoveling the tide back into the ocean. Goats, which in cities are supposed generally to eat empty tomato cans, abandoned vinegar bottles and cast off metallic dishrags and corkscrews, relish a sassafras thicket as an emancipation picnic relishes rattlesnake watermelons. The Christian county farmers are substituting the goat for the grubbing ax with results as satisfactory to the goat as to the landowner. The time may come when the grubbing ax will be an interesting relic of bygone days, like the flail and the spinning wheel. Nobody has estimated the amount that is spent annually to get rid of sassafras in Kentucky, and nobody knows how much more would have to be spent if the sassafras were entirely suppressed. But it is plain enough that there is work for a herd of goats about the size of the herd of American bison at the time the first white hunter saw the first bison.

Farming becomes increasingly scientific. The farmer, who formerly went to the creek for his bath when the weather was suitable, and took it in a washbowl or a washtub at other times, now has it pumped by a hydraulic ram, which works while he sleeps. He feeds the pigs on the "cafeteria" plan, the essential principle of which is letting the pig help himself instead of encouraging him to demand the services of the owner five times a day as an untipped and unappreciated waiter. For a good many years the farmer has "hogged down" a patch of corn and sold pork directly from the cornfield instead of hauling and cribbing the corn and handing it out to the fattening hogs day by day. And now he proposes to goat down the sassafras, putting the goat to economic use after he eats the sassafras and before he eats the tin roof off of the residence or strips the fence posts of the barbed wire to appease his everlasting appetite. It used to be the idea in America that aside from the fact that two inches of a goat's tail would cure any disease the animal was of no value. But nowadays it is pointed out that all kid gloves are not made, or need not be made, of split sheepskin, and that whereas the only way to get milk out of a cow is to feed her legumes, mill concentrates and crushed grain, a milk goat can be kept on any sort of refuse, or used as an automatic sassafras swatter at a cost of nothing a year.

Many farmers' sons who resolved early in life to seek a calling less strenuous than that in which they were unwilling workers, under the parental eye and in fear of the parental cowhide, will regret their decision as they witness the progress of agriculture in the direction of scientific utilization of the forces of nature, and away from the inhuman utilization of the muscle of the rebellious son.

Now that the goat has been found to be profitable, not only to clear land but also to handle after the clearing is complete, it may be that someone will discover that the potato bug is a valuable asset and not a pesky parasite, and that it will pay to bug down the potatoes and sell the fattened bugs on the hoof instead of bugging the potatoes and digging them up after rescuing them from the bugs. A few additional discoveries, further simplifying the problems of agriculture and amplifying the opportunities of the farmer's son to go fishing would go far toward solving the continuously agitated problem of keeping the younger generation on the farm.—Courier-Journal.

Judges and Juries.

The judge pronounces the law in the case, the jury looks after, and acts upon, the facts. The verdict of the jury is supposed to be a conclusion from the facts. If it should happen to be a flagrant disregard of the facts, the judge may (and sometimes does) rebuke the jury. He may even go so far as to order a new trial of the case.
